

On Life In The Sudan

By Bayyinah Sharrieff

Decency is a characteristic of moral senses which none of the common world looked to the Black woman in America to have.

THE BLACK woman in America on the whole, was never considered worthy to receive any respect as decent women. She was and is to an even greater extent today, easy to be used by men of not only America but of all nationalities.

The Black woman of America lost respect for herself through that degenerate process of enslavement, forced to be naked among men and used as cattle to breed more calves.

Open your minds to the truth and realize that the Black woman of America lost all respect for herself through the cruelty of the white slave master. Think about this, 300 years of such breeding of indecency. Now after 100 years up from slavery we still see the Black woman walking around naked, exposing freely (no longer by force) her beautiful Black body with a willing desire to be with her slave master's children.

Black woman of America take a good look at yourself. When I went to Africa, The Republic of the Sudan in 1964 I did not realize this Truth. Just by carrying an American passport, Black women are looked upon as being prostitutes, an easy pick up. This not only holds true in Africa but in Europe as well. (I have lived in Greece, Italy, France, Denmark, Sweden, and traveled through other European countries as well).

To be respected outside of America in Africa, I had to lengthen my garments. Short dresses were not accepted by the decent societies.

BEING A Black with an American passport, I felt very much ashamed, for whenever I went with this identification I was regarded as one not worthy of respect until I proved the contrary to be true.

Black woman of America there is no excuse for your being regarded as one not worthy of respect in this day, for we have one here informing us of what is needed to receive such respect, and admiration by the best of civilized societies. I have traveled and will bear witness to this Truth which the Honorable Elijah Muhammad is teaching: THE BLACK WOMAN IN AMERICA CAN BE REGARDED AND RESPECTED IN TRUTH AS ONE WITH A HIGH SENSE OF MORAL DECENCY, if she follows the instructions of the Honorable Elijah Muhammad. We thank Allah, Master Fard Muhammad for such a great Leader and Teacher.
