

Moral Code For Our Womenfolk

Between two worlds, the black woman stands,
Take the white man's hand Or help build a black people's land.
Cleanse your faces of strange powdered masks
And lower your dress, who cares if they laugh, A people's laughter is often a thing else. Aside from the obvious enjoyment and notoriety such a Negro gets from being able to parade his blonde white escort among his Negro friends, aside from the definite hostility of not only white police but most whites who observe him.

(To be continued in next issue of MUHAMMAD SPEAKS)

sign of fear;
They who laugh know that God and Muhammad are here.
Beautiful black woman, cover your hair, Shyness is an attribute of a woman's care;
Speak softly, honorably and sweetly, Walk gracefully, softly and meekly,
And in such shroud of femininity,
You shall conceive from the seed of serenity,
And perhaps you and I shall some day meet,
In God's New World upon an honored seat.

—TYNNETTA DEANAR