

affection; haters of everything possessing Black blood (even their own children).

Under such treatment the Blackman was made to turn America from wild-land, into a strong and productive nation.

When it became necessary the wicked-wise decided it was best to physically free the so-called Negroes, give them a form of education and further use them to advance the prosperity of America. All of the devils did note, agree that the Black slaves should be physically freed. This dis-agreement led to the civil war. At the end of this war the Blackman was physically freed, but he was not provided with any land to produce his own needs. Therefore, he had to return to work for the former slave-master in order to survive. Although free, the Blackman was still not independent. Many brothers became irresponsible wanderers.