

Breeders of immorality

Black people on a nation wide scale are pointing an accusing finger at White America's filthy, oppressive and corrupt system of education and blaming it for the condition our youth are in today. There is not a parent of a child who has been turned over to the system, that doesn't know the evils that exist in the white man's educational techniques.

INSTEAD OF being breeders of civilization, which is supposed to be the purpose of education, they are the breeders of immorality. It is their greatest desire to be able to break down the morals of our people for once the moral fiber of a nation is destroyed, so then will that nation be destroyed.

From the very beginning to the bitter end our children absorb all of the filth they have all Holy Praises to Allah (God) Master Fard Muhammad, and Thanks Him for His Divine MESSENGER MUHAMMAD AND FOR HIS DIVINE MESSAGE.

JOIN MUHAMMAD'S TEMPLE OF ISLAM in your City, or write to MUHAMMAD'S TEMPLE NO. 2, 5335 So. Greenwood Ave., Chicago, Ill. Be reminded again, "If you are wise, it is to your own advantage; and if you are arrogant, you alone shall bear it." Pr. 9:12. ALL PRAISES ARE DUE TO ALLAH. ALLAH IS THE GREATEST!

to offer and are made to believe they are attaining something to be proud of.

At a very early age seeds of indecency are sown in the minds of our children..... seeds that will, after being nourished, bud into complete and total moral ruin.

Go into these so-called institutions of learning and look at the filth that surrounds your child every day. First look at their teachers, so-called educators and civilizers, parading before their students practically nude, exposing themselves in mini dresses fitting to leave very little to the imagination. Then our little girls follow suit and join the parade in dresses almost up to their waists, thinking it's cute.

Before they are barely old enough to understand, they are systematically paired off and mated up.... the beginning of a vicious circle that never ends. Little girls and little boys climb out of their cradles declaring their girlfriends and boyfriends.

The trick is in motion every day but a special holiday was designed for the explicit purpose of match - making even among the very young. In classrooms, on February 14th, which we all know is Saint Valentine's Day, little girls and boys traditionally exchange candy and valentine cards expressing their love for each other. On this day, they say, a little naked, white baby called cupid, flies through the air with a bow and arrow, piercing the hearts of couples and bringing them love. But you'd better check cupid out.

Does a heart pierced by an arrow signify the bringing of love or the bringing of death?

Can't you see the results or should I say products of these little tricks today? America's venereal disease and illegitimacy rate has skyrocketed. A young girl can hardly get through high school without becoming pregnant. The frightening part of it is the fact that they have lost all shame. Some continue to go to school up to the last weeks of their pregnancy and accept their condition quite casually.

This problem has reached such a critical stage that in some cities they have established what they call Schools for Unwed Mothers. They have even gone so far as to recruit female high school guidance counselors to pass out birth control pills among Black teenage girls with the explanation, "Don't get your values mixed up. They're going to do it anyway, so we might as well help them by reducing the risk of pregnancy so their education will be uninterrupted."

If this educational system is functioning in the best interests of its students, why didn't they instruct these "guidance" counselors to help guide them out of this low way of life? Why didn't they attempt to guide these girls into the knowledge of what an injustice they are doing to an innocent Black child who would be raised without a father and branded illegitimate.

Rather than subjecting these girls to the risk of the many harmful and dangerous side effects caused by the pill, why didn't they attempt to make them aware of the injustice they are doing to themselves and their people? No, they couldn't do this for this would be working in opposition to their main objective bringing this type of disgrace upon our people.

If you need to be convinced of the moral decay spread in the U.S. school system, investigate the physical education departments in Public Schools.

Physical Education is an unavoidable requirement unless the student has some physical disability that will warrant a doctor's excuse, and this is very difficult to obtain. They must take this course and abide by every rule and regulation, or be failed and forced to repeat it in order to graduate. Now, let's examine and question the motive of some typical regulations enforced upon the students.

Two girls are assigned dressing rooms which are barely large enough for one person to change in. These dressing rooms are without doors or curtains and allow no privacy whatsoever. Every day after each gym and swimming class they must take a shower or they will receive a failing grade. This shower is taken in a large open room with several spikets lined along the walls. A class averages thirty to fifty students each period and all of these girls are crowded in this room, completely undressed, waiting their turn.

The boys dress and shower under similar conditions but unlike the girls they must swim completely nude. In these classes some are subjected to mockery and ridicule of a degenerative nature. In answer to a question asked by one student, as to the reason for this restriction of trunks, he was told that the purpose of this was to check the boys for any type of disease they might have. Of course, being trained to accept the white man's judgement without question, nothing more was said.

Another questionable aspect that is quite obvious in these physical education departments, is the fact that a surprisingly large percentage of the instructors have recognizable homosexual tendencies.

These are seldom discussed subjects because some won't talk about it, but I can because I managed to maintain an E average. I failed every year until I convinced some good doctor how ill I was. This enabled me to graduate.

It seems the better grades you receive—the more corrupt you've become. A white hand is reaching into the minds and souls of Black people trying to make us partners in the filth and shamelessness of the white world.

The question to be posed at this point is Are the parents of these misguided Black children aware of these corruptive practices? And if they are aware, what type of people are they who would continue to let their children be subjected to this sort of filth? What could they be afraid of? or could we refer back to the old cliché, "People who live in glass houses can't throw stones."

We would love to cast all the blame on the white man's school system, the white teachers, or the white minded Black teachers, or the administrators, and the books. But what makes us think that the system is so powerful that it can so thoroughly twist the minds of our Black children and we as parents can do nothing to counteract this?

It is the parents in too many cases who aided our enemies in the destruction of our youth. It is the so-called parents who, in reality, who set the stage for the act to begin.

Where you can stand and rave accusations at the educational system, they can in turn ask you, What type of an example did YOU set for your own child?

The Black Slave of Desire

By Beverly Zarrieff
Mosque No. 2

SINCE THE 400-year physical slavery, the Black man and woman have undergone many changes. Now Blacks are controlled through mental slavery and most recently, this slavery has been perpetuated through the desires of the Black man.

The Black man so desires to be his own boss, that Blacks have patterned themselves after "boss Charlie," the white man, taking on the ruthlessness and mercilessness of the former slave master.

The Honorable Elijah Muhammad, Messenger of Allah, teaches us that the Black man had no other pattern than the slave master to pattern himself after, because he was robbed of his God and history.

With the increasingly great presence of the Honorable Elijah Muhammad's teachings the white man has had to produce a stronger hold over Black America. He has done this through twisted values of sex desires.

The white man, as Messenger Muhammad teaches us, was not made under the natural law of man, therefore, everything he touches he takes out of the natural law of man, or distorts it. These distorted sex drives and practices have bound Blacks like a slow down process in doing something for Black self.

The Honorable Elijah Muhammad, teaches us that the destruction of the Black Family was a basic means of controlling Blacks, for 400 years. Again, through the twisted and distorted desires of the Black man, the love for the family is generally destroyed and keeps his mind on such a low level that even the love and belief in God is increasingly a height the Black man is unable to reach.

What then is the answer to this seemingly inevitable syndrome?

NOW SINCE the coming of Allah (God), Who Came in the Person of Master Fard Muhammad, to Whom praises are due forever, Blacks can have a strong identity that will afford a future of Black accomplishments in independence, peace and harmony, with Blacks having a strong family tie of dignity and respect.

Black brother, let us unite and renounce the slavery ties of the white man by following the Messenger of Allah, the Honorable Elijah Muhammad. He is the path to the Black man's future.

May Allah, forever bless this great and dedicated truly free Black Man, The Honorable Elijah Muhammad, Messenger of Allah, to us all.

Part Three

FROM THE slums and ghettos to the middle class suburbs, Black families are beset with a profound sense of disunity, functional displacement, and inner turmoil. No one seems to know their place or what role they're supposed to play.

Black family structure has suffered a total collapse, leaving the father or male image dead and true motherhood scoffed at and considered an old-fashioned thing of the past. As a result, the products of this feeble foundation are in a state of extreme rebellion and are labeled the most irresponsible, confused, and recessive generation ever known. And maybe they are, but what combination of environmental elements changed their course and reversed their direction?

We all understand the fact that the white man's educational system is directly responsible for much of the mental and moral deterioration of Black youth, but, in recognizing that only 35 to 40 hours a week are spent in school in comparison to the 128 to 133 hours they are left under the jurisdiction of their parents, we must consider another contributing factor, parental influence.

The parental image is the first example a child has to follow and their every effort, conscious and sub-conscious, is directed toward the emulation of this image.

Their minds are like little memory banks that are, from the beginning, recording, storing and filing away everything they see and everything they hear, for the purpose of future reference.

It is the nature of children to study and pattern themselves after adults with whom they associate, but patterning their lives by the examples of the vast majority of Black people today would be leading themselves to a tragic and inevitable downfall.

MANY OF US get the wrong impression of what a child really is. In relating back to the infant or baby stage at which a child is helpless and unable to fully grasp or understand his surroundings, some tend to think of them as nothing more than a thing or an object, rather than a person...a little person that grows increasingly sensitive to the environment in which they live.

Most parents behave in any manner that suits their frame of mind and think that their child won't see, hear, or understand what they are doing and eventually become affected by it. But this generation of young Black people are living contradictions of this belief.

They emulated the character traits they saw in their parents and when these traits became manifested and intensified in their own character the parents stepped back in horror, outraged at the monsters they helped create.

It seems we, as a whole, have lost all appreciation for that bond of family unity and understanding that should be just as much a part of a home as the walls. The psychological roots of this attitude stemmed from the subjection of our ancestors to slavery.

Under the rule of the white slavemaster, there was no such thing as a Black family. Black men were unable to provide a permanent male figure with which his children could identify. The only example he was permitted to set for his children was that of a house boy, a field nigger, or a stud. He understood the fact that at any given time he could be sold, transferred and permanently separated from his family.

THE BLACK WOMAN wearing the title "mammy," was taken out of her home to work in the slavemaster's home, caring for his family, while neglecting her own. She was used as the breeder of future slaves and she too knew that at the white slavemaster's decision her children or her man, who were regarded as nothing more than merchandise, could be taken from her and sold.

This probably accounts for the detachment, the cold unconcern, and the distance, that is known today as the "generation gap." Four hundred years ago white America programed our people to act and react in the manner they do today.

They defined our roles, our attitudes, and every sense of our involvement in Black family life as it exists today. It is they who programed our complete disregard for moral values and re-structured our lives to coincide with the consumptive immorality of their own.

Fornication was made a past time. Adultery was sanctioned as merely an attribute of marriage and sodomy considered just another trait or characteristic that exists to be accepted and understood.

These conditions were, at one time, forced on us but what about today? Four hundred years ago it was called slavery, today it's called "having a good time" and "doing your own thing".... which is anything, with anyone, and under any circumstances...nothing seems to matter any more.

My Apology

I would like to make an apology for the mistake of putting an article that I had written on the page I put my article on was not the page language on. So I apologize for my mistake.

I made a mistake. If I had looked at my article the language, I would not have put it on the articles on What Islam Has Done For Me are placed

My article was not in such language of What Islam Has Done For Me. My article should have been placed in the articles that carried such articles and language in which I made. So it was a mistake. Thank you for the correction of my error and mistake. I did not know that I was reminded and I happened to look at the page, which heading was, What Islam Has Done For Me.

I was so ashamed for writing a foreign article on the page that was intended for such articles as What Islam Has Done For Me. Thank you.

Part Four

YOU, SO-CALLED mothers and fathers....You were in a position to help mold and reshape the minds and destinies of Black youth and yet you went, so diligently, about the task of warping their minds and denying them any promise of a future, through your own ignorance. You have set for them the destiny of blind, ignorant, fools.

Black men don't have time to be real fathers to their children or provide sufficiently for their families. No, some are too busy searching for any excuse that will take them out of the home and away from their families.

There are those that can be called absentee fathers who aren't married to the mother of their children. In most cases such as this, the child only knows of the father through their mother, and this limits them to a one-sided outlook on life.

Then, there is the 'phantom father,' phantom meaning, an image in the mind which seems to be real; mere show; appearance with no substance. He is present only in form and his position is indefinite and indistinct. They function behind a thick, suffocating, fog of indifference, through which they are unable to penetrate warmth, love and understanding.

Sometimes the 'phantom' father can be more psychologically injurious than the absentee father because they seem to be present and the disillusionment comes in discovering they might as well not be. These are usually the 'proud providers' who feel that after they provide food, clothing, and shelter for their families, nothing more should be expected of them. They fail to understand that there's more to life than materialistic things.

The white man has set up welfare lines to compensate material needs but only they can provide that effort to bridge that, ever widening gap of trust, understanding, respect and love between themselves and their children.

Then, we have the ('frustrated father') who feels he has to be too many people. He has to be the man, the husband, the father and the provider and they are not ready or willing to assume these responsibilities.

The pressure eventually mounts into frustration that must, in some way, be released to prevent explosion. This type will often forsake these responsibilities in one way or another and be forced to go in search of something to relieve a growing sense of guilt and worthlessness. This, sometimes, will produce alcoholics, heavy smokers and dope addicts.

And there's the "ego tripper".... a very pitiful man. He is so full of self-doubt, insecurity and feelings of male inferiority, that one woman isn't enough to mend his wounded ego and prove his manhood.

He usually has his women scattered all over town and is constantly on the hunt for new conquests to add to his list. This will often lead to the bringing forth of innocent Black illegitimate children who are left nameless and fatherless, all for the sake of a boosted ego and so-called evidence and proof of masculinity.

This only proves that they are so unsure of really possessing masculinity that they must constantly reassure themselves that they are really men.

And what about those who find they are void of this quality and fall into the category of the homosexual? What type of a male image will they display to their children?

A young Black child, growing up in a world dominated by such mentally, morally and emotionally sick people barely has a chance from the beginning. They are born the products of broken men, untimely hopes, and unfulfilled dreams.

They are born victims of a cruel and hostile system with the inherent and bitter awareness of the forces which oppress them and at a very early age they begin to feel the crushing weight. Then they are cast from the crumbled ruins of what is mislabeled as family life, and into the snake-pit of white society for their so-called education.

But since a child receives his first interpretations of the world from his parents, it is with his parents that correction must begin.

We have looked at a few of the bad examples Black men are setting as fathers but Black women, who represent the "mother" image, stand in a far from blameless position. Her position must, too, be examined.
